The sign in screen for our "College Compiled" app along with the tentative logo.

The home screen after signing in, gives you your general pertinent information such as any in-app tabs that have notifications. Always displays the hours of free-time you have calculated using how many hours of sleep and ETC for assignments you have put in your calendar.

Clicking the top 3 dots will open the main menu. Classes and calendar; messages should be "chat" and acts as an in app messaging/voice call service for users. News is patch update info. Plugins is where you would import user made plugins for websites to be tracked with CC. You have a friends list and share button to share the app with anyone. Pursuits keeps track of what classes you plan on taking next year etc. While rewards would be a direct link your class leaderboards and teacher given awards.
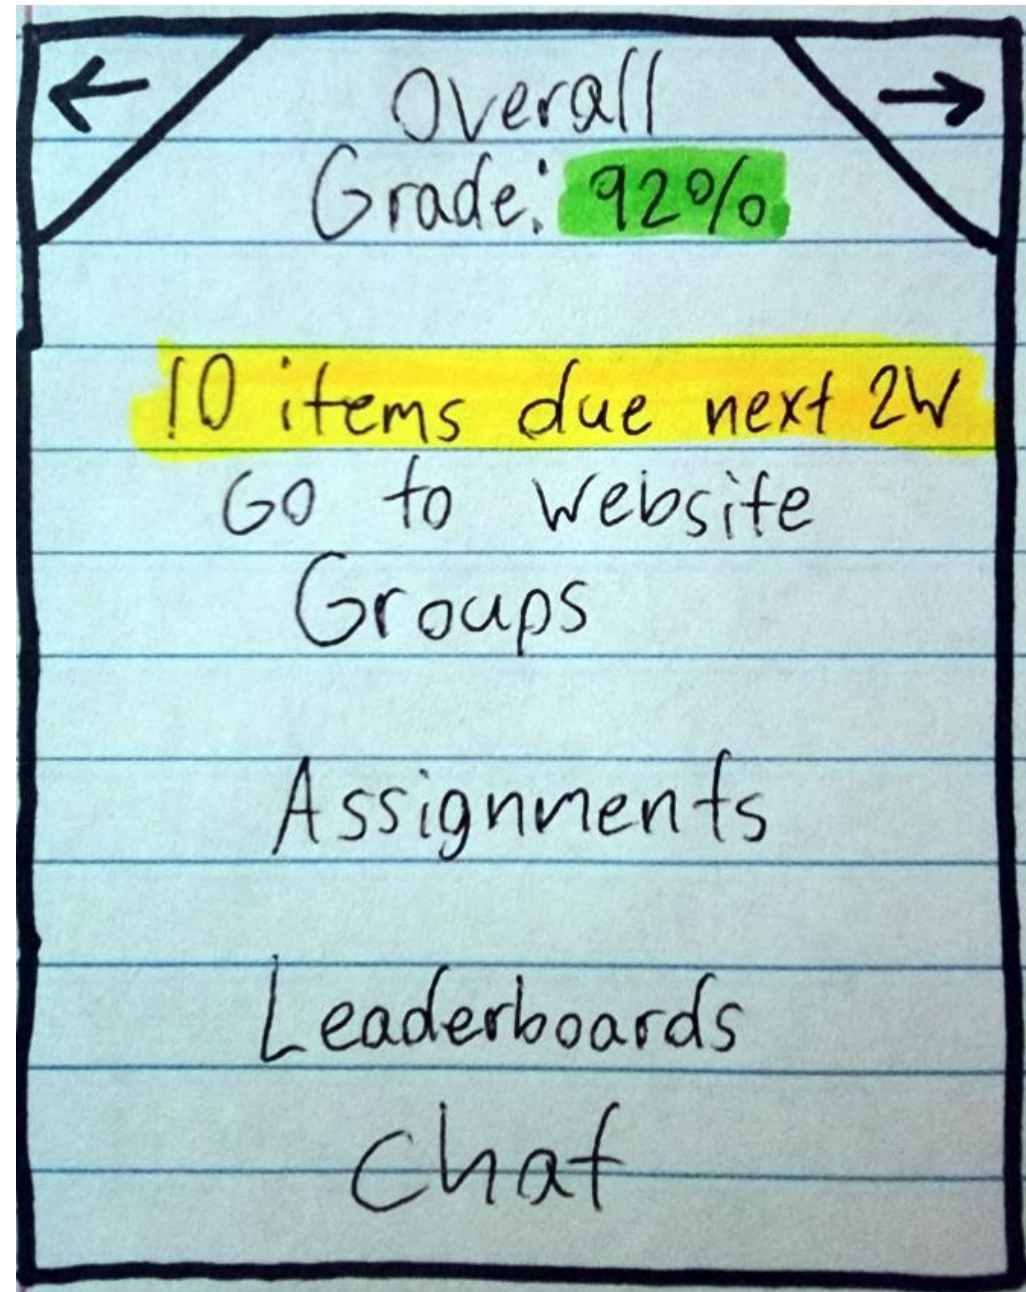

Clicking on classes will pull up a list of all your classes spanning all websites you have imported; and the instructors name for each. A notification number might could totaling notifications per class.
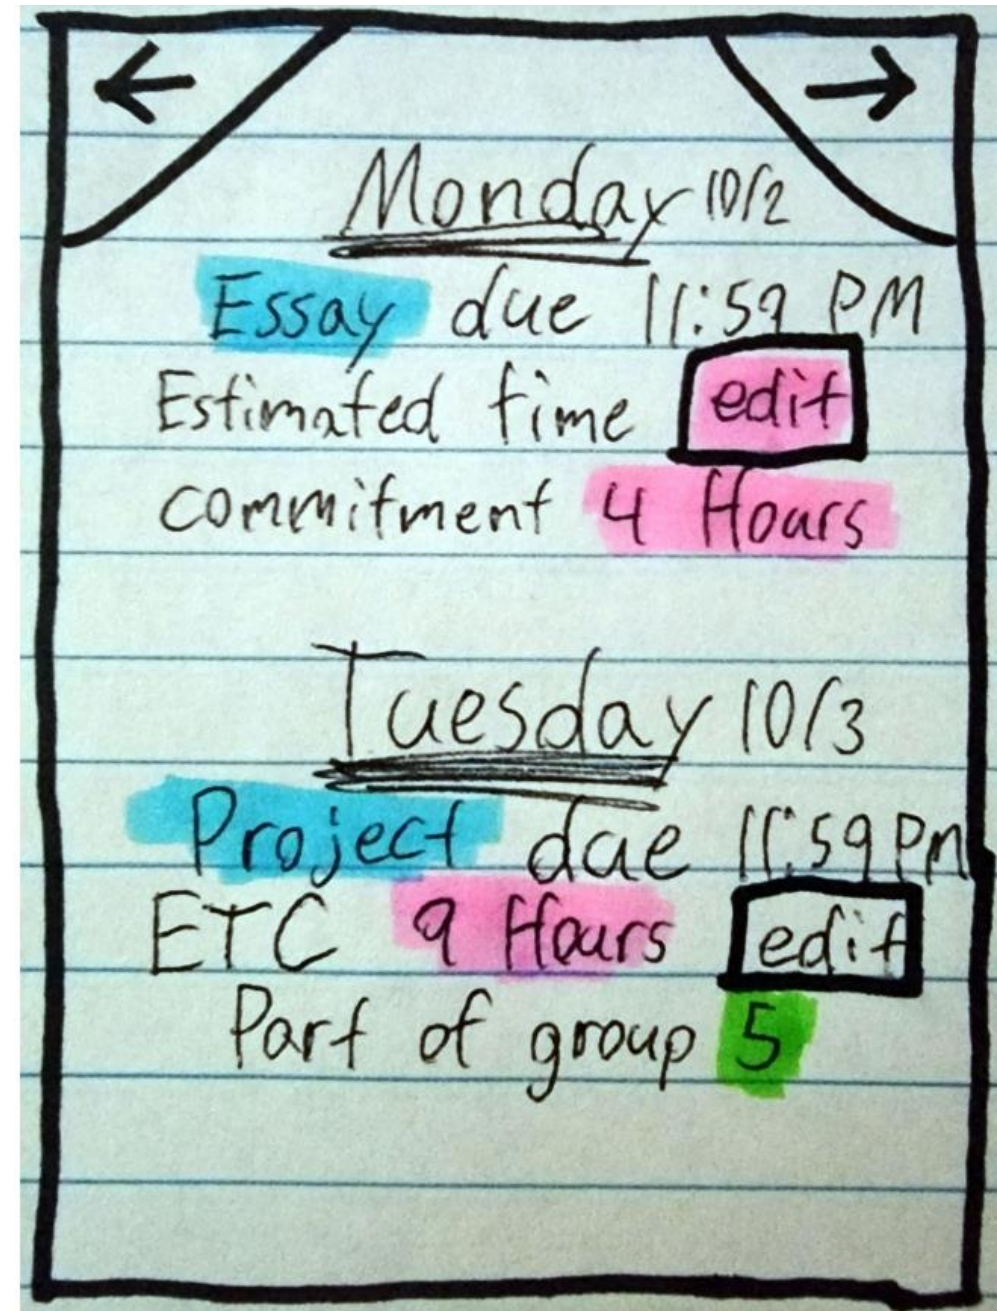

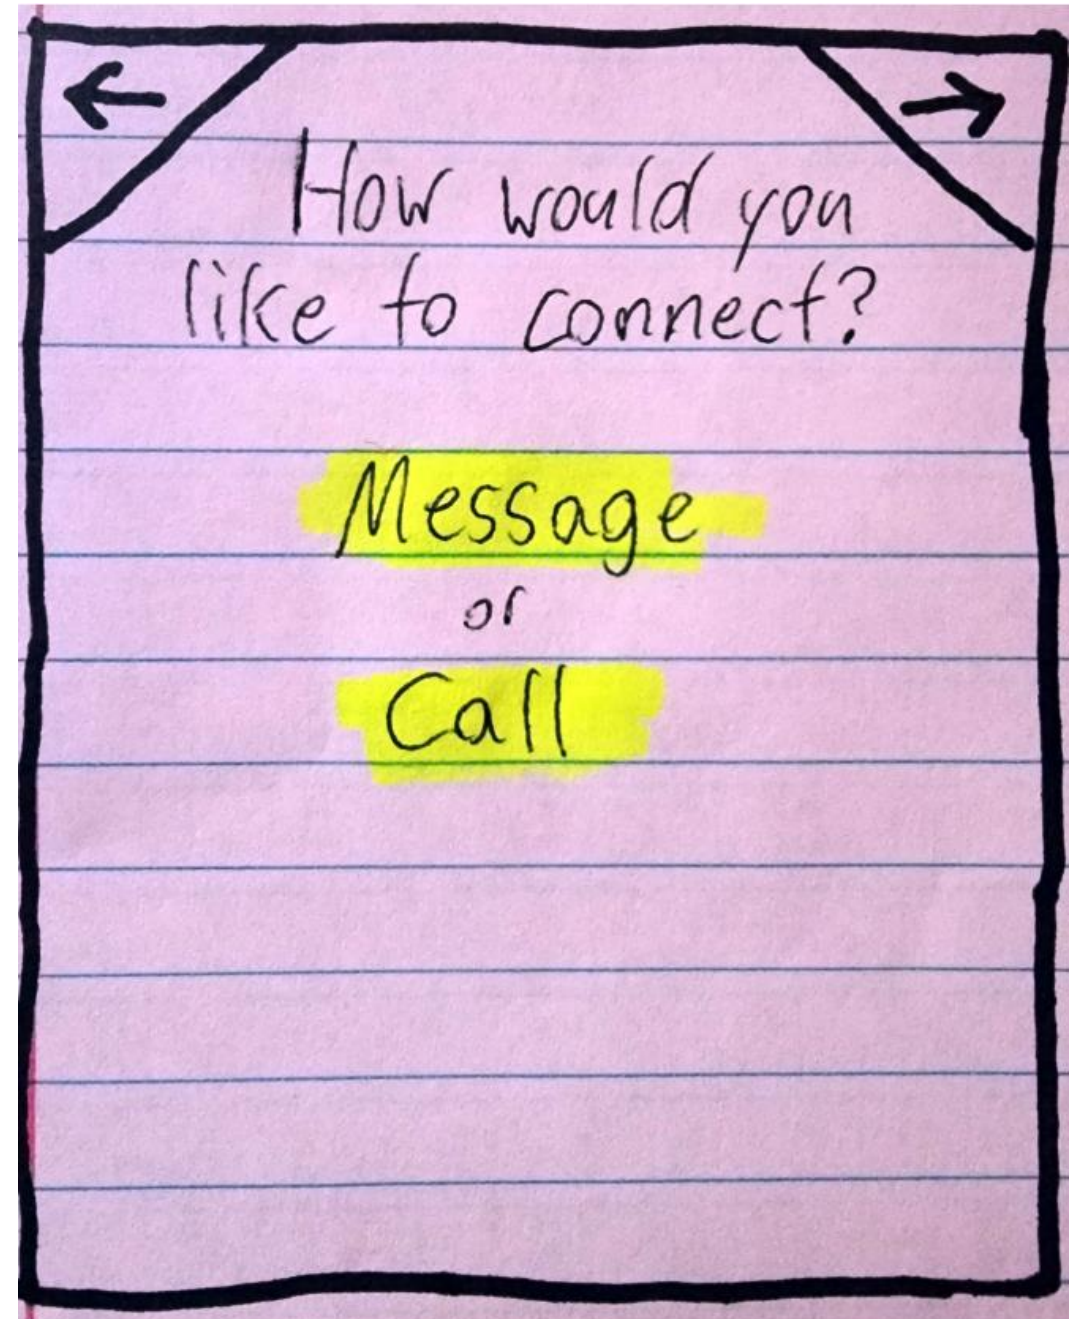

Accessing a class, at the top you will see your overall grade for it. Underneath that displays the amount of things due within a period of time; this time could be changed in settings. Also a link to go to this class on its native website. Here we also have the option to message anyone associated with the class, class specific assignments, opt-in class leaderboards and look at any class groups you're a part of.
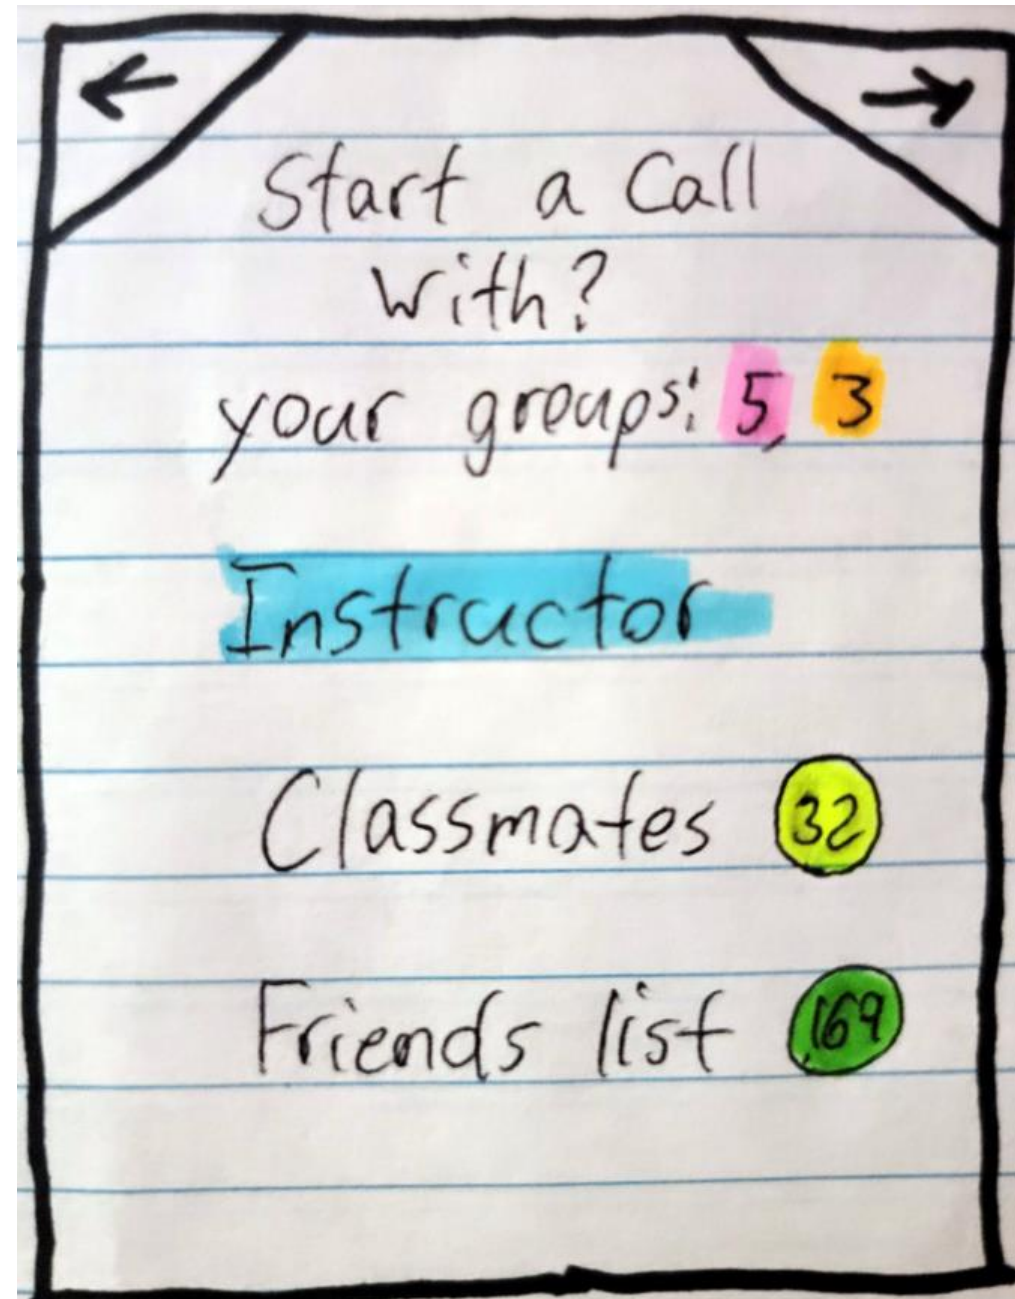

Clicking on assignments displays a day by day listing of your course work with time due, the estimated time take to complete it, which can be changed with the edit button, and if it is a group project what your group is.

If instead you choose the chat feature, a simple prompt will display asking how you would like to get connected, message or voice chat.

I chose call, and now you will be given the ability to start a call with anyone using the apps in-house system. Prompted automatically with your class groups, your instructor, and then after that a roster of your classmates and finally your friends list.
